USED GRANITE COBBLESTONE

Our granite cobblestones are all antique paving stones that came from the streets of Chicago and the surrounding areas. All throughout Chicagoland, granite cobblestones were used to line the tracks of the old street cars. Over time the City has been removing these old tracks that are buried under the modern streets. Granite is an incredibly durable stone that is great for magnificent looking driveways, walkways, walls, or garden copings. The cobblestones are all at least 100 years old, and provide a timeless building material.

The crisp, angular edges of extruded brick are produced as a result of the manufacturing process in which material is forced through a die under high pressure, forming a stiff column of material. After the column is formed, it can be textured in a variety of ways. The column is then sliced into individual brick. Extruded brick can usually be identified by its core holes.
